Rabbi Rosenthal's Message

This past month, I attended the Central Conference of American Rabbis' (CCAR) Convention in Philadelphia, PA.

The conference is a time to meet new colleagues and reunite with old friends, to learn from experts in the field, to get a sense on the pulse of the American congregation's interests, challenges and passions and how to best meet them.

This CCAR convention included many diverse workshops, lectures, break out groups and informal discussions. For now, I'd like to share a few snapshots of special moments that impacted me the most.

For our opening program, we visited the Weitzman National Museum and learned from Dr. Lila Corwin Berman. She led us through the complicated history of what it means to be a citizen here in the United States, and how that has changed throughout time. While historians often claim that America has been a place of belonging and acceptance, we learned that this was not always the case. From the state level, there were far more prerequisites to be a citizen. Jews couldn't hold public office without making a Christian oath and there were laws that limited their economic rights. In one particularly frightening case, a Jew was stripped of their citizenship after spending time abroad in Israel.

This lecture reminded me of the fragility of democracy and the power that corrupt individuals have to cause incredibly harmful changes to our freedoms and rights to be citizens. The first Amendment in the Bill of Rights prohibits the federal government from infringing on our rights to practice Judaism, but as history has proven again and again since 1791, we can never take our citizenship for granted.

That evening, we discussed how easy it is for those who hate to take away our freedom and safety. We heard from Rabbi Charlie Cytron-Walker, the Rabbi in Colleyville, TX who was taken hostage in his synagogue with a few congregants in 2022 because a 44-year-old British Pakistani believed the antisemitic trope that Jews have control over the government, and thought that he could get a terrorist released from custody. Rabbi Cytron-Walker shared a preview of a new documentary about his harrowing tale with never-before-seen footage from inside the synagogue. His wife's testimony was particularly moving. She shared that he had always promised her that she would never be alone and could go first and that the day that he was held hostage he had called to say that he didn't know if he could keep that promise. Many were moved to tears. We then discussed how we could still be welcoming while doing our due diligence to keep our folks safe through security and security training sessions. This is such an important and ongoing topic for Jewish congregations today.

The next day, I went to the LGBTQ community center in Philadelphia and learned about the history of LGBTQ Philadelphian Jews who fought for their civil rights. There is a life size mural of their protests in the 60's in front of the liberty bell. It was fascinating to hear that the folks who participated in those protests were the ones who started the gay pride parades in NY after Stonewall.

After a general history, some of the folks from the Jewish LGBTQ community shared accounts of how they were completely excluded from synagogues. As a result, the original LGBTQ only synagogue was formed in 1975. They shared a space with a local reform temple starting in 2005, and finally merged with that same synagogue in 2015. The newly merged synagogue created gender neutral restrooms, affixed rainbow mezzuzot to the entry ways and kept the artifacts from before the merger on the walls of the building. And today they are continuing to explore new ways to create safe spaces of belonging.

On Tuesday, the focus was on a topic that has transformed our communities, our changing relationship to Israel after October 7th. The conference did a beautiful job of highlighting and honoring our Israeli Reform rabbinic colleagues throughout the conference. And that night, they led services and shared poetry and personal accounts of their experiences. It's not often we hear direct accounts from colleagues, and their words were powerful, emotional and included strong words for the return of the hostages yet also hopes for the end of the fighting.

Rabbi Oded Mazor (the Rabbi of Kol HaNeshama) wrote a prayer for the beginning of Adar (a traditionally joyful time). He said, "May it be Your will that we are able to hold together the diverse needs within one community to cry and to laugh, mourn and to dance, to celebrate as always to sit in silence. May it be Your will... that we witness a turning reality in a new direction; not of killing, fighting and destruction, but of salvation demanding goodness, words of peace and truth."

Overall, the week was full of highlights, learning, renewal, inspiration, collaboration, and intergenerational dialogue.

I look forward to sharing further gleanings with our lay leader partners as we move forward together.

May learning always be a treasured tool and an asset that informs, challenges us and feeds our souls.

President's Message

Seth Berman

It seems like just yesterday that I was talking about Passover in the April 2023 bulletin article. It is easy to know that Passover is coming, supermarkets have out the beginnings of Passover displays, spring training is coming to a close and allergies are in full swing.

To me there is no greater holiday than Passover. Like a good amount of our holidays you can use the old Rubrik, "They tried to kill us, we survived, lets eat". Yes, I know that Passover is a great deal more than this. Afterall how many of our prayers mention "led us out of Egypt" in it?

Passover to me brings back memories of large family Seders where we would see family members you hadn't seen in a year, counting the pages until the magic phrase of "dinner is served" (I think it was page 21 in our Haggadah), that tasty dinner, rushing to find the afikomen, Fox's Ubet Chocolate Syrup to make egg creams and many other wonderful desserts.

As I have grown older (and hopefully wiser) I realize just how important this holiday is. It shows the resilience of our people. We survived bondage, rushed out of the living areas without having time to bring food to eat, crossed what was a body of water while being chased and trekked through the desert for 40 years before reaching the promised land. Of course, it wasn't full of us questioning Adonai but that is what we do, isn't it?

We are what we are largely due to what happened during the story of Passover. We are a strong and vibrant religion. Yes, we have our challenges and yes we might question what we are doing (even on a congregational level) but we are here to stay as a people. So as we sit at our Seder table whether it be at your house, a family member's house or at our Congregational Seder, engage in a good conversation. Where are we as a people and where are we going?

Jeannette and I wish you and your family a Zissen Pesach,

Seth C. Berman

Spring is officially here and everything is starting to bloom. I smile as I look around and realize that we have survived the winter.

I do realize that there are many people who have had a rough winter and they are suffering. There has been much illness and there are people who have long roads ahead of them.

Please don't feel alone! There are many resources at the Temple to offer many different kinds of help. There are many people to whom you can talk and who can offer assistance/advice. The clergy, Board members, the outreach committee, and other congregants are always available to lend a hand or an ear (or both) to anyone in need.

We are always here for you, but we don't always know who you are until you call, text, or email us. Please reach out to us so that we can get to know you and try to help. Your communications will always be kept in the strictest confidence.

Please remember also, that there are many families in our congregation and local communities who need our support; we are still being asked to reach out with donations of non-perishable food and household items. Grocery dollars aren't going far enough to feed families and the shelves in the Food Pantry are almost empty. There are bins in the Temple and school lobbies into which donations can be placed.

Grocery store and pharmacy cards are always welcome and are an easy way to help people who need assistance. Donations to the Outreach Fund are greatly appreciated.

I hope that you continue to enjoy everything that spring, and soon summer, has to offer. Thank you for your ongoing generosity.

Thank you for your ongoing generosity.

Please continue to bring non-perishable food donations so we can continue to support our local community

SPRING

The Temple Fundraising Committee has made arrangements to sponsor a drive to collect gently used clothing and household items to be sold "by the pound" by B'nai Israel for cash.

If you haven't already begun, please start your spring cleaning now! Set aside your "surplus" and no longer used items to be dropped off at the Temple in plastic garbage bags and boxes. Clean items in sellable condition that you might otherwise give away, throw away or move to the back of the closet can be donated, recycled, and resold to earn money for the Temple at no cost to you.

Items for collection can include all types of clothing, accessories and soft goods such as bedding, tablecloths and pillows packed in plastic bags. Small items from the kitchen including dishes, silverware, hand-held appliances, knick-knacks, toys, games and electronics must be packed in cardboard boxes. Hard cover and paperback books, CD's and DVD's are welcome packed separately in boxes as well.

Your donations can be dropped off according to the following schedule:

Friday April 12th, before or after 7:15 pm Family Services, in the Temple lobby.

Saturday, April 13th, from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm, in the school lobby

APRIL 2024

Hi Sisters,

Happy Spring! The robins are singing, the daffodils are blooming and spring is in the air. Of course, that means that Passover can't be too far away. All of us at Temple are busy with Seder plans for the different celebrations that will take place this month.

The annual Sisterhood Women's Seder is on April 9 and should be a wonderful and inspirational evening of wine, women, and song, with a newly created Hagaddah by Joi Garvin. Religious School Seders will be held for our students. And finally, the Temple Seder will be on April 22 with Rabbi Rosenthal leading the event.

Hopefully, everyone has their Seder plans in the works, and that you will be starting off the Passover season by joining the ladies on the 9th. If you don't feel like cooking there is still time to get your reservation in for the Temple Seder. Please join these festivities to be a part of the telling of the Passover story, and to be a part of our Temple family.

Ken and I wish you all a Zissen Pesach.
